Abstract

Capitalism Customary in most of countries of the world is the hallmark of free trade. This system justifies and supports every means of securing maximum wealth. Hoarding is one of their methods by which grain is stored to create false Scarcity, and when demand of grain rises, it is sold at the price of seller's choice. This results in accumulation of wealth in a few hands and what follows is that rich become richer and poor poorer, and ultimately the Society splits up into various classes, However, Islam forbids all such methods and means that lead to obstructing distribution of wealth, deteriorating economic Condition of People and causing annihilation of economy. On the contrary, Islamic system supports and even distribution of wealth and it desires that an Islamic state must abandon all unfair means of profit-making. It directs practicing Islamic laws in economy as well. In the capacity of researcher, selection of this topic aims at reviewing effects of the aforesaid capitalistic approach on the economy, condemning it in the light of Islamic law Hadith and Jurisprudence) so that efforts could be made for the establishment of Islamic system of economy in the country.
