Abstract

This research paper is based on Sharia status of “Manufacturing”. Manufacturing means to place an order for preparation of articles/goods. In ancient times, the civilizations as well as manufacturing industries were very limited. Hence manufacturing of goods was on a very limited scale. In this regard a few examples of weapons, cloths, socks, and utensils etc. are present in the books of former scholars. In current industrial era where vehicles, ships, machines, factories, bridges, buildings, weapons, even government projects inside the countries or with others countries can be included in manufacturing. This research article has been compiled to address the important of this issue, its literary meaning, various terminologies used for manufacturing as well as its justification/non-justification described by the scholars has been reported with research based arguments. Also, after thorough discussion whether “Manufacturing” is a deal or promise, its terms and conditions are also discussed. At the end, types of manufacturing and its results/conclusion has been discussed.
