Abstract:

God Almighty has bestowed human beings with different blessings and qualities. Some of them are provided with wealth and influence but with a lack of inability of doing business, making contact with people effectively. On the other hand some people have the ability to run a business but they do not have their own assets. Resultantly if these two different types of people do not help each other their wealth and abilities would be wasted. Contrary to this, if they work together, both of them will equally benefit. The entire community and society will utilize their usefulness. The sharia, therefore, allows this kind of business.
